

The lowdown on workplace learning

Learning and development programs are crucial to the success of your employees. Here are some stats from a LinkedIn Learning survey to further elevate the "always be learning" mindset in your organization.

59%
OF L&D
PROS

say their top priority is upskilling and reskilling employees, a 15% increase since June 2020.

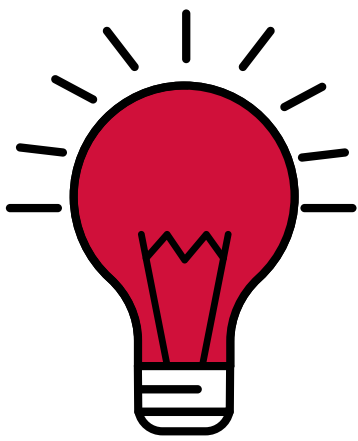

64%
OF L&D PROS

agree that L&D shifted from a "nice to have" to a "need to have" in 2021.

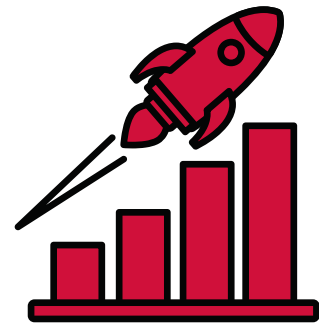

97 MILLION JOBS

will be created by 2025, many of them technology jobs requiring skills in AI, blockchain, data security, emerging coding languages and more.

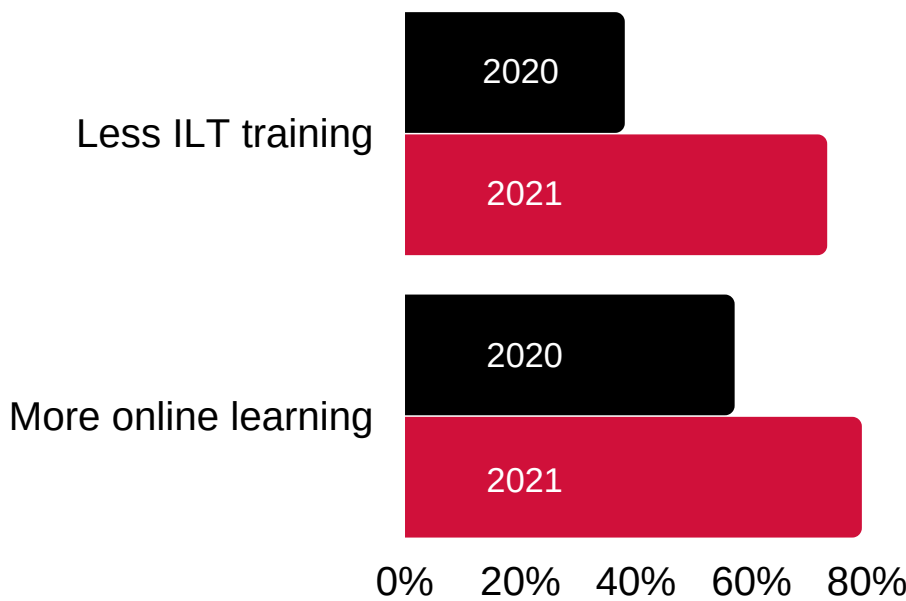

76%
OF GEN Z
LEARNERS

believe learning is the key to a successful career. They are learning more than ever and focused on career growth.

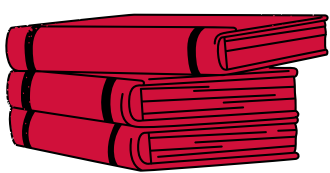

Instructor-led to online training

Most organizations will continue to shift budgets away from instructor-led training (ILT) to online learning instead.

The graph represents % of L&D pros who expect the investment to change.

INFORMATION SOURCE

LinkedIn Learning's Workplace Learning Report 2021

Most important skills this year*

1. Resilience and adaptability
2. Technology skills/digital fluency
3. Communication across remote or distributed teams
4. Emotional intelligence
5. Cross-functional collaboration according to L&D pros globally*