IN THE NEWS

U.S. rapidly shutting coal in favour of natural gas- Since 2010, utilities have retired or announced the closure of more than 500 coal-fired power plants in the U.S. This has taken more than 100GW of coal-fired generating capacity out of the American electricity mix. About one-fifth of those closures were facilities either converted to or replaced by natural gas-fired plants, according to a new report from the U.S. Energy Information Administration. The EIA's data shows that 121 U.S. coal-fired power plants were repurposed to burn other types of fuel between 2011 and 2019. More than 100 retired plants were converted or replaced by gas-fired generation, representing close to 30GW of replacement capacity. The decision for plants to switch from coal to natural gas was driven by stricter emission standards, low natural gas prices and more efficient new natural gas turbine technology, according to the EIA. Combined-cycle gas turbine (CCGT) plants accounted for 15.3GW of that replacement. Rising Export Expectations, Warm Weather Lift Natural Gas ETFs- Natural gas prices and related exchange traded funds burned brighter on Friday as improving global demand helped fuel expectations on liquefied natural gas exports and warm weather in the U.S. bolstered electricity demand for cooling. The United States Natural Gas Fund rose 4.0% Friday as Nymex natural gas futures advanced 2.9% to $2.23 per million British thermal units. Asian spot liquefied natural gas prices increased to a more than four-month high this week as prices firmed in Europe and the United States, Reuters reports.
