

LIVING COST STANDARDS REPORT

Compensation programs can be complex to establish and manage. Your compensation structure needs to facilitate recruitment, retention, and equity across geographically dispersed worksites. Additionally, you're tasked with cost control, resource management and the relentless war for talent.

As a result, companies are looking for new, innovative approaches, but policies that lack consistency and internal equity offer little to no support and may end up being more expensive. Runzheimer Living Cost Standards reports are designed to address differences in employee purchasing power across multiple work locations.

THE RUNZHEIMER LIVING COST STANDARDS REPORT

Designed specifically to help companies address differences in employee purchasing power, our Living Cost Standards Report offers flexibility. Reports can span multiple office locations. They can also enhance cost-of-labor information with cost-of-living information. This helps companies develop defensible compensation strategies when factoring in different worksites.

Every report factors in all cost-of-living components:

Housing

Taxes

Transportation

Goods & Services

Reports also feature comprehensive, in-depth analysis provided by Runzheimer cost-of-living data intelligence. Every report factors in all cost-of-living components (housing, taxes, transportation, goods and services). This ensures a complete package of living-cost analysis. Locations—specific to the United States and Canada—are ranked by index for quick retrieval and analysis of individual cost components.

THIS REPORT OFFERS

Precise location information as specified by clients.

Breakout of key components, including taxation, transportation, housing and goods and services.

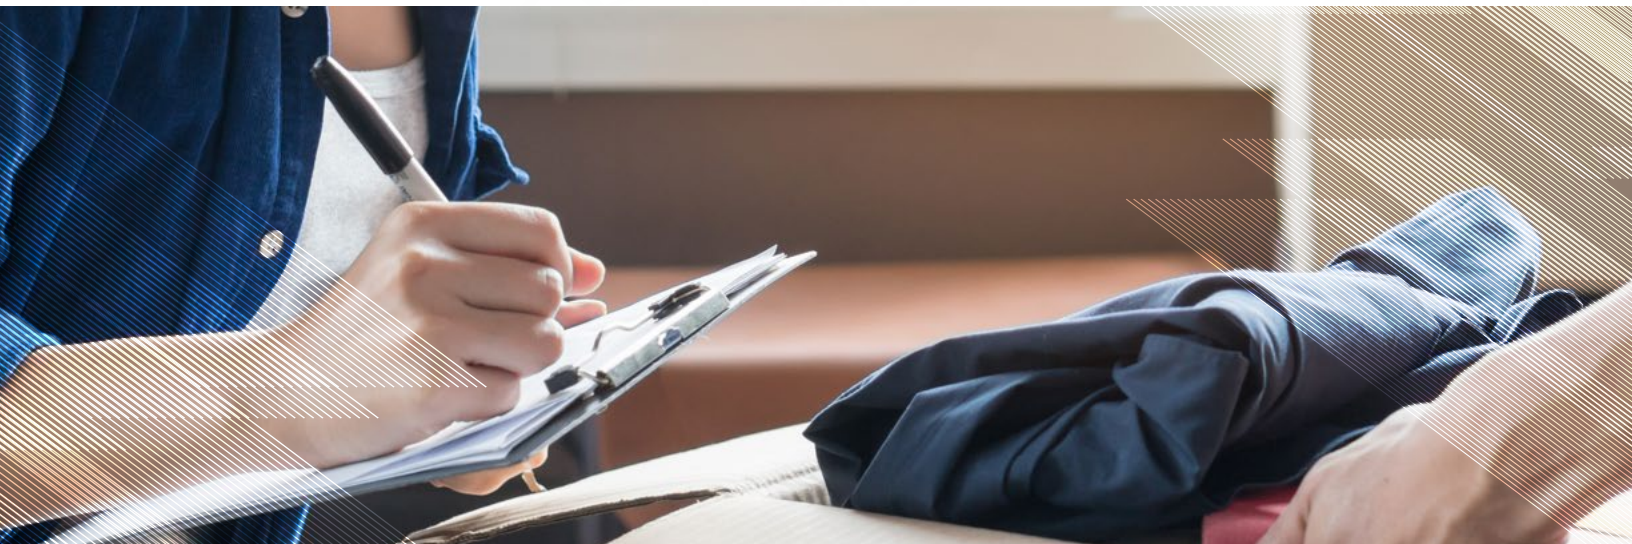

Appropriate family size, income and housing status (homeowner or renter).
