Transitions in Leadership Lead to a New Phase of Growth for Taylor

CINCINNATI, OH — June 01, 2021 — Taylor Logistics Inc., a Cincinnati-based third-party logistics solutions provider, is thrilled to announce its next growth phase with two strategic leadership changes. These strategic initiatives will focus on continuous improvement and heightening Taylor’s customer-centric focus.

Grant Taylor Shifts to a New Role as Chief Operating Officer

To focus more on his passion — advancing and enhancing Taylor’s operational processes through technology, communication, and design — seventh-generation Grant Taylor has decided to concentrate specifically on his role as Chief Operating Officer. As COO, Grant looks forward to further developing his relationship with Taylor’s partners, and he is dedicated to improving operational excellence and leading Taylor’s corporate strategy.

“This promotion is so well deserved as Grant has had tremendous success leading change and improving efficiencies across the board at Taylor,” Said Rex Taylor, Taylor Logistics sixth-generation owner, and President. “He will bring immediate leadership and focus to a variety of critical operational initiatives and growth strategies.”

AJ Raaker becomes Taylor’s Director of Warehouse Operations

In conjunction with Grant’s shift to COO, team Taylor is excited to announce AJ Raaker as the new Director of Warehouse Operations to help lead the company into its expansion phase, development, and continuing to foster operational excellence.

AJ will continue to bring his exceptional energy, values, discipline, and vision to our diverse, passionate team in his new role. For the past 13 years, AJ has been with Taylor with an operational background specializing in solving competitive challenges, reimagining products, services, technology systems, and extensive expertise in management and logistics.

Taylor is delighted to congratulate Grant and AJ on their new roles and couldn’t be more confident about future opportunities.
