Authenticity Above All Else

In the world of skateboarding, nothing is held in higher esteem than authenticity. Likewise, treasury and finance practitioners must maintain their authenticity and commitment to life-long learning and professional growth to ensure they remain the trusted advisors their organizations need them to be. So, how does skateboarding's most famous personality balance the line between authenticity and "selling out"?

One of the most exciting action sports heroes and iconic entrepreneurs of the 21st century, Tony Hawk walks the walk every day as he continues to be the face of the sport he loves, while managing his business empire and award-winning charitable foundation.

With Tony's typical modesty and humor, he tells the amazing story of his unprecedented success from skateboarder to CEO — all while maintaining authenticity in all he did.

Disruption DNA

Disruptors see the world differently, bringing unique viewpoints, technologies, talent and ideas from all over the world. To build a Disruption DNA, treasury and finance professionals must be prepared to abandon the set of ideas and practices that may have made them successful. To develop the mindset and muscle around disruption, individuals and teams need to take control of their own destiny and in a world of uncertainty, this requires bold decisions and an unexpected approach. Innovation Strategist, Shawn Kanungo, presents his roadmap for facing the onslaught of technological disruption impacting finance, by exploring how to think and act differently to ensure you remain competitive and relevant.

The Generalist Advantage: Zoom Out to Anticipate the Future

Blinded by expertise and single-minded focus? It happens. But in a fast-paced world driven by complex and diverse factors, the ability for finance professionals to connect the dots is often more important than developing the dots. “The future doesn’t have to surprise you,” so says Vikram Mansharamani, global trend-watcher, Harvard Lecturer, author, and investor. Mansharamani shows attendees how to look differently at their business, spot risks, take multiple points of view, and capture opportunities others miss. His generalist framework is the cornerstone for success in the face of the overwhelming flood of political, economic, technological, social, and market forces that bombard and distract finance teams every day.

Are Zero Interest Rates Really Different This Time?

While the Global Financial Crisis is far behind us, the current pandemic shares similar economic conditions that have generated a low-rate environment as well as stark differences. Speakers discuss how the playbook has evolved from the last low-rate environment, examine the surface similarities and uncover the underlying differences. Learn how leaders are navigating this market, what they have learned from the past and what has changed.

Treasury Performance: How Do I Measure Success?

The COVID-19 crisis, economic uncertainty, heightened risks and executive/board expectations for real-time information and crisis assessment have placed massive demands on treasury. To navigate volatility, treasury is turning to metrics, controls, benchmarks, and world-class practices for activity to provide the foundation for achieving and showing success. This session makes sense of the challenge of determining which activities or actions can be measured, quantified or calibrated in a meaningful way and provides insight into the value and pitfalls of measuring treasury, covering internal sources, industry benchmarks, and world-class practices.

Utilizing Technology to Improve Cash Forecasting

Understanding your company's cash position is integral to effectively managing liquidity. In this case study, Bayada, a home health care provider, leveraged both ERP and TMS functionalities to create a cash forecast that now fully supports strong liquidity management and have a better view of cash requirements. Embarking on this initiative they considered key factors including potential data sources, the level of granularity needed, forecasting methodology for various cash flows, the relevant time frames, and finally how and how often that forecast would be revised. Bayada's Associate Director, Treasury Operations and their lead consultant share the lessons learned and benefits gained.

Creating an Agile Finance Team at Swiss Re

Finance teams will need to reinvent the services they deliver and how they are delivered in order to help organizations make quick and informed decisions. Swiss Re took on the challenge of transforming their finance team from a traditional hierarchical structure to one that is more dynamic. They began by creating a clear culture/vision, dividing work across global centers, adjusting staffing to get the right resource, reducing non-value add activities, and turned the organizational chart on its side (literally). Get an inside view of Swiss Re's successes and failures through this transformation and their outlook on sustaining a transformative finance team into the future.

Response, Recovery and Growth Strategies for Global A/R Teams In 2021: Lessons from Uber

With the onset of the COVID-19 crisis, A/R departments saw an inevitable shift in executive, customer behavior and buyer expectations and in response customer-facing A/R teams, such as payment and collections adopted new strategies and technology for a new way of working. At Uber, credit and cash teams turned their focus on minimizing the impact of the crisis and maximizing growth. In this session, speakers from Uber share their tried and tested survival methods for successfully managing a global cash department and adjusting business plans to face the demands of a turbulent economy.

Prepare Now to Accelerate Your Business with Instant Payments

The Federal Reserve is paving the way for an industry transition toward ubiquitous, faster payments in the U.S. With real-time clearing and settlement capabilities to support a broad range of transaction types and use cases, FedNowSM, The Fed's instant payments service, promises to empower financial institutions, technology providers, and businesses to serve the hyper digital world of tomorrow. This session gives payments leaders a look into the developments that are forthcoming, the benefits of instant payment, and outlines why taking action today is paramount to stay ahead or else risk falling behind. Leave this session empowered with the knowledge your organization needs to embrace instant payments.

Human Factors: The Greatest Threat to Your Cybersecurity Strategy

Cyber fraud is threatening the operations and bottom line of virtually every organization. An increased growth in cybersecurity careers indicates combating cyber fraud is a top priority at many organizations yet, cybersecurity measures often focus on technology and overlook the human factor. An FBI agent, a corporate executive, and a cybersecurity professional with expertise in human factors share their knowledge, experience, and perspectives on today's biggest cybersecurity risks. The discussion covers the role human factors play in exposing businesses to attacks by malware, ransomware, business email fraud, account takeover, and more.

Achieving the "Holy Grail" of a Fully Integrated Hedging Program

Although the move toward end-to-end technology integration to manage exposure is steadily progressing, achieving efficiency and automation is still illusive due to the reliance on manual workarounds and legacy systems that remain in many corporate treasury processes. This session offers a deep dive into corporate treasury programs that integrated and automated their financial risk management programs from gathering exposures through hedge accounting and across asset classes. Senior treasury professionals share the opportunities and challenges encountered in structuring and implementing initiatives to streamline FX balance sheet, FX cash flow, interest rate hedging, and hedge accounting programs.

Building a Risk Management Program JENGA Style

Identifying an organization's risk exposure is not just extremely important but becoming more of a requirement rather than just a best business practice. To effectively mitigate risk, cybersecurity, data privacy, payments channels, and overall enterprise risk management programs must contain strong components that solidly fit together and remain sturdy under a sudden shift in risk. Building a risk management program does not need to feel like you are playing a game of Jenga! This session identifies key controls to verify or even validate that your risk management program can stand up against the constant inherent attacks or economic volatility your organization may be facing.

Risk, Resilience and ESG: Building it from the Ground Up at Dealer Tire

Building Environmental, Social, and Governance competence in the face of cascading risks challenges many companies today. Together finance and treasury possess the knowledge and tools that position them at the nexus of ESG efforts, both from a compliance and reporting standpoint, but even more from a leadership and strategic perspective. In this session centered on the work of ESG initiatives at Dealer Tire, senior risk and treasury professionals discuss the challenges and opportunities at play in inspiring, building, and reporting on ESG with a broad stakeholder group.

Inclusion in the Capital Markets is Spelled MWVBE

Amid greater calls for equality, capital market issuers have added more MWVBEs (Minority, Women, or Veteran Business Enterprises) to their syndicate lineup. However, issuers often see this practice as simply a necessity, perhaps mandated by a regulator or board of directors, a “good” idea or the “fair thing to do.” Understanding the MWVBE’s business can help issuers strike the correct balance to generate stronger execution and increased investor diversification. In this session learn about MWVBEs capabilities, their financial strength and business plan as well as how issuers can use their services for mutual benefit.

Doing Well by Doing Good: A Case Study on Committing to Corporate Sustainability

The Mastercard Center for Inclusive Growth advances equitable and sustainable economic growth and financial inclusion around the world. Panelists share their stories of what brought about a partnership between Mastercard Treasury, the Center for Inclusive Growth and CNote, a women-founded & led firm on a mission to close the wealth gap through financial innovation. As private sector increasingly commits to socially responsible investments, ESG and racial equity initiatives, the role of corporate treasuries is now on the forefront. Corporate treasury involvement is a new model that facilitates the role of corporations in creating more inclusive financial systems. Attendees of this session gain a greater understanding of how to become an active participant in social impact investment and learn strategies for building a culture of sustainability, inclusion, and social responsibility.
